Philadelphia, Pa., June 29 .-- The Athletics won a finely contested game from Washington to-day by 4 to 0.

It was a pitchers' battle between Vickers and Johnson in which the former had the better of the argument. Although the youthful Washington twirler was hit harder than his big opponent, he would Boston. RHOAE New York. RHOA team had he received proper support and played the game carefully himself. He had speed, good control, and a cleve curve ball.

Vickers was strong from start to finish never giving any evidences of weakening or losing his command. As a consequence the Nationals never had a live chance t cross the plate, much less capture the
